The CBIT Open Source Community (COSC), in collaboration with the Career Development Centre (CDC), is organizing an awareness session on Google Summer of Code (GSoC), a prestigious global program that engages new contributors in open-source software development. Over 12 weeks or more, participants collaborate with open-source organizations on real-world projects under the guidance of experienced mentors. Recognized in the professional community, GSoC offers a stipend ranging from $750 to $3,000, with the primary requirement being a passion for open-source contributions. This session will help interested students understand the application process, project selection, and benefits of GSoC. CBIT has proudly produced GSoC contributors in recent years, including Sri Guru Datta (AIDS, 4/4) - Contributor GSoC'23, and Omkar Kabde (CET, 3/4) - Contributor GSoC'24. Interested students from II, IV, and VI semesters of circuit branches are encouraged to participate, with attendance recorded and submitted to respective departments.

Objectives:

- Introduce students to GSoC and its benefits.
- Guide students on the application and selection process.
- Share experiences and best practices from past contributors.
- Encourage participation and foster a strong open-source culture.
