Dear NLN Reddy,

Greetings from Infosys!

In these times of hyper-competition and social media overdrive, simply doing a good job alone may not always translate into career-wins. If key decision makers and opinion-leaders in your organization aren't aware of the value you create, you're likely to miss out on opportunities to improve your skills and be invited to participate in growth-driving assignments, despite your hard work and good performance. At the same time, seeking to be in the public eye without core substantial value to offer can backfire as well. Being visible, but also being credible at work, is important for every career. Striking the right balance helps you position yourself as a valuable employee, demonstrate your abilities, and advance your career.

In this session of Knowledge Hour with Infosys, industry experts will discuss the nuances of building credible visibility at work, tactics to improve your work profile, and strategies for staying visible while working remotely. Our speakers will also respond to questions from the audience during the live Q&A segment.

Leaders from Infosys are coming together for an exciting live chat on the topic –
